Translator's Notes

This document is a translation of the diary account of the meetings held by members of The Beth Jacob Society in Plymouth, Massachusetts from January 31, 1909 – September 17, 1916. The authors of this document are the various elected secretaries of the synagogue during that time period. They include: Sam Snyder, M. Resnick, Barnet Seldin, Frank Kabelsky, Joseph Brodsky and others.

Subjects discussed in the document include daily synagogue business such as the election of officers and the naming of prayer leaders during the high holidays as well as the recording of heated disputes between members, sometimes with fines and punishments meted out. In one instance, an argument actually came to blows. Most significantly, this journal chronicles the fundraising and building of the synagogue, its transformation from a dream into a reality. This text records the process from the Society's decision to buy the property from Mr. Harlow on January 25, 1910 to the establishment almost four years later of a committee to handle the synagogue's opening. For the first nine months of its existence, the Society refers to their new building as The New Synagogue at Congregation Beth Jacob. Eventually, it becomes simply - The Congregation Beth Jacob Synagogue. A major concern after the building is finished is the cost of seats and seating arrangements during the holidays. Some members negotiate their seats as part of a fee for providing a service to the community.

There were several challenges in translating this document. The first involved decoding the handwriting. Some authors like secretary Sam Snyder had excellent penmanship, others like secretary M. Resnick were very difficult to read. Whenever a word or phrase is illegible or untranslatable, I make a note of that in the text. Depending on context, I am usually able to make an educated guess as to the likely meaning of the illegible word. Also the Yiddish language at this time did not have a standardized spelling or official grammar. Therefore, depending on which secretary is keeping the notes, the spelling and the grammar vary considerably. All of the record keepers use various English words written in Yiddish characters such as officer and appointed. Sometimes they are modified with Yiddish prefixes or suffixes, adding another layer to the process of deciphering the text. Unrecognizable words are not found in a dictionary. Lines and numbers and general punctuation in the translated text mimic corresponding lines, numbers and punctuation in the Yiddish original.

Names that appear in the text are transcribed phonetically into English according to the standard YIVO orthography of transcription unless they appear in English spelling elsewhere in the text or in the on-line Beth Jacob Congregation History. Those names that appear in their official English spelling include: Frank Kabelsky, Max Sadow, Max Toabe, Samuel Snyder, Joseph or Jacob Steinberg, Skulsky, Bolotin, Isaac Stein, Joseph Cohen, Israel Dezorettes, Louis Resnick, David Resnick, Morris David Resnick, Morris Benjamin Resnick, Simon Resnick, Jacob or Joseph Sadow, Barnet Seldin, M. Shreiber, L. Goldstein, Esser Millner, A Kaplow, A Julius Cohen, B. Dretler, J. Krinsky, Joseph Brodsky.

Special Thanks to Dr. Sarah Bunin-Benor, Professor of Jewish Studies, Hebrew Union College, Los Angeles, CA; Shane Baker, Executive Director, Congress for Jewish Culture, New York, NY and David Elbaum, Esq., Independent Scholar, Brooklyn, NY for their assistance in deciphering difficult to read handwriting, obscure spellings and unusual words.

synagogue Congregation Beth Jacob. 187 What happened in the altercation is that we came to blows, that is Mr. Israel Dezorettes raised his hand and hit Mr. Jacob Sadow. We have come here today in front of our community and witnesses that we depend upon the Society in terms of how they want to proceed<sup>188</sup> so that we are satisfied that is we must be satisfied and we give our signature that there will be no more disturbances or fights in the synagogue from either of us.

From today on, we are agreed and we will accept whatever people decide, including any punishment<sup>189</sup> the Society gives out.

Today we give our signature that there will be no further disturbances in the synagogue from us.

Name: J. Sadow<sup>190</sup>

Name: Israel Dezorettes<sup>191</sup>

And we decided and passed that Mr. Dezorettes should personally assure 192 ten people that he will never act like that again. And when he comes to pray in the synagogue, he should sit on one chair, not walk around and not speak with anyone. If he does not obey or causes another scandal
